I am a 16-year-old with a profound passion for computers and programming, constantly exploring new possibilities in coding. Growing up bilingual in Germany has equipped me with fluent English and conversational German skills. Currently, I am challenging myself with Japanese, despite initial difficulties. My journey in programming began with Python during high school, where I developed proficiency through practical projects. I expanded my skills into game development with C#, creating a personalized cookie clicker game featuring upgrade mechanics. Currently, my focus is on mastering C++ and advancing my proficiency in web development with HTML and CSS, as evidenced by the quality of this CV website.

My relentless curiosity and passion for computers drive me to constantly seek new challenges and deepen my understanding of programming. Each hurdle I face strengthens my skills and propels me towards new achievements in the digital realm.
